Optimizing Government Processes: How Value Stream Management Can Help

Federal agencies depend heavily on IT to deliver services and interact with citizens. In the 2023 fiscal year alone, civilian agencies within the Federal government were expected to spend over $65 billion for IT programs. Like other organizations, these agencies have too many projects and programs that are not delivering the value or returns needed. To solve this problem, you need to align around the value you want to deliver and then ask the right questions.
